OGUK Board

Responsibility for setting OGUK's position on policy matters lies with the Board, whose members represent a cross-section of the industry.

The Board comprises 20 senior industry representatives from operator and contractor companies; a non-operator or independent oil company; and the chief executive of OGUK. Vice co-chairs have been reassigned as co-chairs of the Advisory Councils, who are supported by small steering groups to help shape the agenda.

Members are appointed for two years, at which point they are required to stand down and offer themselves up for re-election, with the ability to serve for a total period of five years. This ensures a rotation cycle and a broad representation of the membership on the Board.

Councils

There are two councils which meet four times a year (twice separately and twice jointly). Every member may send a representative to one of the two.

- Operator Council: for representatives of the oil and gas companies, whether operator or non-operator
- Contractor Council: for representatives of the contractor/supply chain companies

Both councils act as advisory bodies which review and advise on any matters relating to the business of OGUK referred to it by the Board or by member companies.

Forums

Member companies may nominate a representative to attend any of our forums. The forums provide the focal point between our member companies and OGUK. They also ensure that the association is aware of company member positions on particular issues and provide guidance on policy options and proposals. Forums are also a vehicle for specialist engagement with external stakeholders such as the Oil and Gas Authority (OGA), Departments for Business, Energy and Industrial Strategy (BEIS), Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA), HM Treasury, government agencies, the Health & Safety Executive (HSE), academics and consultancies.
